DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

This past season was a rollercoaster of emotions and experiences. The greater mountain community suffered several profound losses this year including the passing of NWAC forecaster, Matt Primomo, in March of 2024, a loss that shook our organization to its core. We struggled to finish the last 6 weeks of the 23-24 forecast season, knowing that we had lost an integral and cherished teammate, Leavenworth outdoor community member, and beloved husband and father.

In addition, this winter's snowpack was lackluster for long stretches thanks to El Niño. Your support and the community's spirit and enthusiasm for getting outside constantly reminded us why we do the work we do.

Despite a challenging season, we have achievements and high points to share from the past year. We sent a dozen staff members to the International Snow and Science Workshop(ISSW) for a week in Bend, OR, representing NWAC's largest ISSW participation in our history. Over 1000 practitioners and researchers from around the world enthusiastically gathered for the first post-pandemic, in-person ISSW.

We held our most successful Snowbash ever at evo Seattle which saw over 400 folks come together to support NWAC, raise $40,000 for avalanche education, and celebrate winter's return. NSAW was back in an all-new venue and format, and we expanded our Meet Your Forecaster series to several new locations. It was so heartwarming to reconnect with familiar faces and welcome new ones into our ever-growing backcountry community.

Our Trailhead Outreach program connected with more people than ever before and continues to be a valuable research opportunity in understanding backcountry use. Partnering with the University of Washington's Recreation and Data Lab, this program gathers insights on how many people are hitting the backcountry and who they are.

This fall, we launched our new mobile app, "Avy". It's designed to make reading forecasts and accessing mountain data easier on a phone. Next season we'll have seven other avalanche centers using the Avy app. We're excited to hear what you think!

This year, we also returned our educational programming to pre-pandemic levels, ensuring we continued to meet your needs despite the snow challenges. Your support and enthusiasm have been our driving force, and we're eager to build on this momentum in the 2024/25 season.

Behind the scenes, NWAC continues to play an integral role in national avalanche center collaboration as we work towards a better and more consistent forecast product for you, no matter where you recreate.

We sincerely thank you for your memberships, observations, event attendance, and everything else you do to support us. It's looking like the season ahead is a return of La Niña–hopefully, we'll see you out in the snowy mountains!

Cheers,

Scott Schell,
Executive Director

Dennis D'Amico,
Forecast Director

SEASON SUMMARY

Simply put, this was a tough season for us at NWAC. Matt Primomo's death came in conjunction with two other massive losses within our professional community. Nick Burks, Wallowa Avalanche Center and former Snow Safety member at Mt Hood Meadows, passed away the day before Matt. In mid-April, Rob Coppolillo, a Seattle-based IFMGA guide and avalanche educator, died while working in British Columbia. Each of these friends and colleagues will be forever missed. We are grateful for their impacts on our lives, operation, and community.

FORECASTING OPERATIONS

Like much of the Mountain West, our snow season began slowly. Fears of an El Niño winter similar to '14-15 (the worst recent snow year on record according to many of our weather stations) loomed large. The season was generally below average in terms of precipitation and snow depth, but it was a far cry from the dismal snowpacks of the 2014-15 winter. Even if winter seemed reluctant to start in December, it didn't want to fade away too quickly. Throughout May and early June, spring snowstorms delivered snowfall at mid and especially upper elevations.

Above-average temperatures and frequent atmospheric rivers became the general themes of the winter season. Together, these two traits limited the growth of lower elevation snowpacks, while the higher terrain built closer to average depths. The abundance of crusts facilitated frequent persistent slab avalanche problems that managed to linger for weeks on end. Unfortunately, on March 1st, one of these persistent weak layers led to an avalanche fatality on Darland Mountain west of Yakima, WA. This accident marks the first known avalanche death in this forecast zone.

A second fatality occurred on March 29th, when a solo traveler climbed near the top of Mount St Helens where he triggered a large cornice, fell several hundred feet into the crater, and released a second, very large slab avalanche. Miraculously, he survived this initial ride of nearly 1200 vertical feet. Separated from all his gear, including his emergency communication device, he attempted to ascend back to the summit ridge through extremely steep and complex terrain. Just before cresting the crater rim, he triggered yet another slide and sadly did not survive this last avalanche.

Despite the late start, frequent rain, and lower-than-average snowpack, we saw community engagement increase across the board this winter. Travelers submitted over 1,700 observations, an increase of 10% from last year's previous record. This increase likely stems from the launch of our new app, Avy.

WEATHER STATION INNOVATION

Weather forecasting plays a crucial role in creating NWAC's avalanche forecasts. The mountain weather forecasts combined with a comprehensive understanding of the snowpack are the essential ingredients to building a detailed avalanche forecast. Data from the 52 weather stations in our network provide us with vital information to supplement and assess the accuracy of our weather and avalanche forecasts.

NWAC Weather Station Projects

1. Heather Meadows

We installed a new type of snow depth sensor. This is part of a multi-year project to improve and stabilize snow depth measurements across the network.

2. Hurricane Ridge:

A fire destroyed the Hurricane Ridge Visitor Center in May 2023. We restored communications to the weather station in the fall and added new instrumentation to collect incoming solar radiation.

3. White Chuck:

We serviced our newest remote weather station located in a very snowy spot at 5000' outside of Darrington following its first full year of operation.

4. Paradise, Sunrise, and Crystal-Campbell Basin:

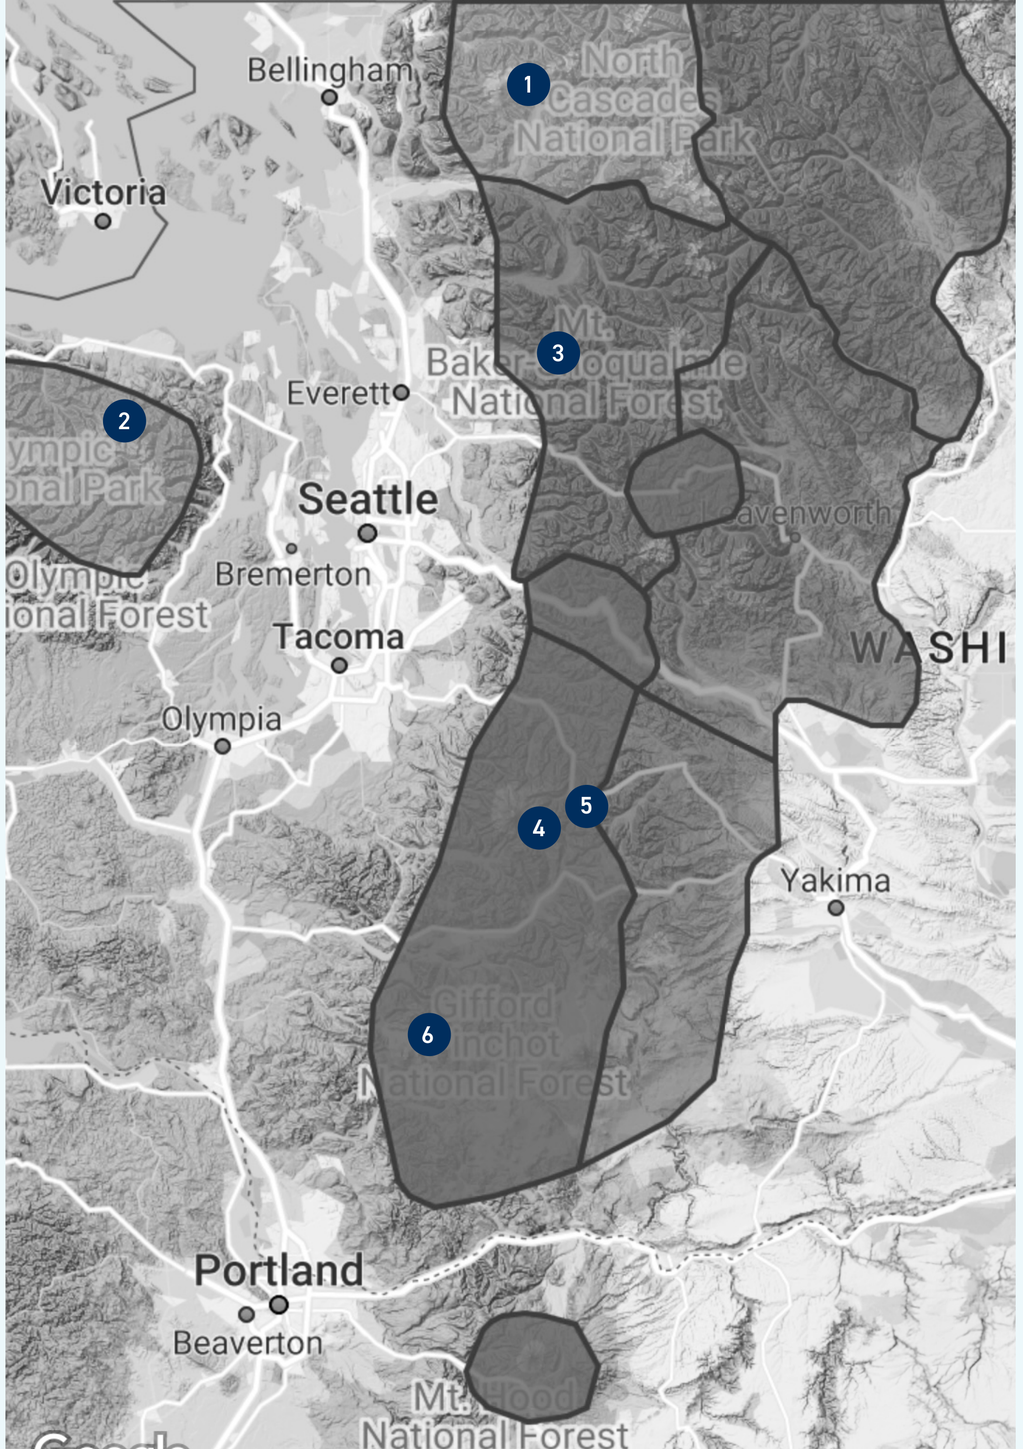

We installed a new type of snow depth sensor. This is part of a multi-year project to improve and stabilize snow depth measurements across the network.

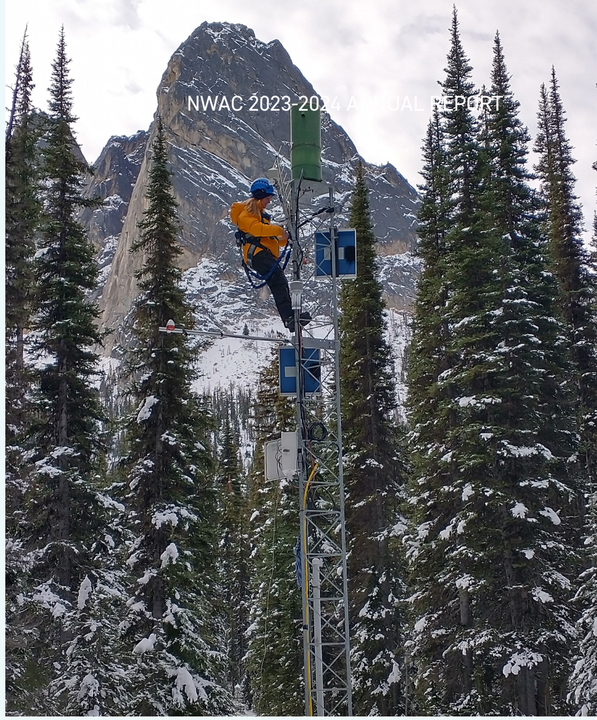

5. Chinook Pass:

With our DOT partners we installed new power systems at both the upper and lower site within the last year. We also upgraded and serviced existing instrumentation.

6. Mount St. Helens:

We installed a new datalogger, program, and batteries.

TECHNOLOGY | APP LAUNCH

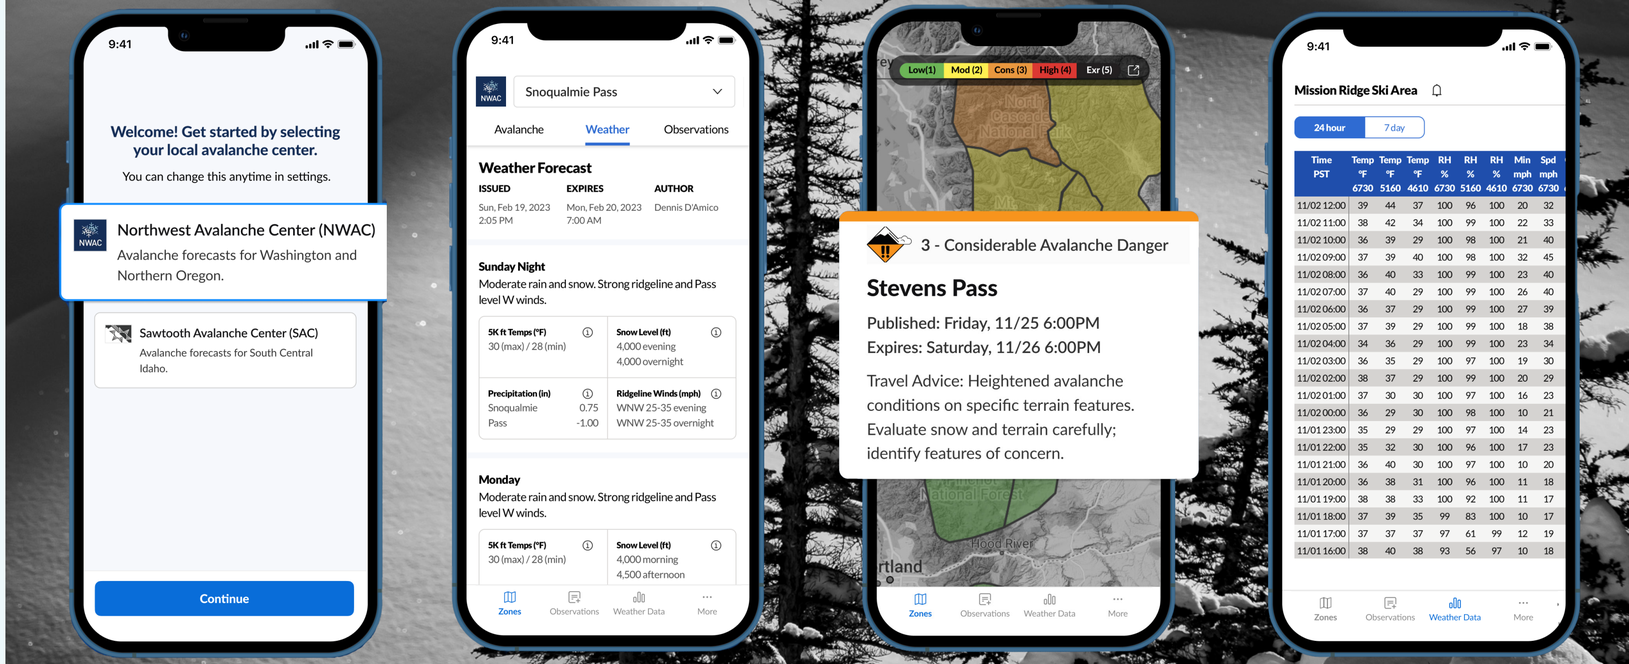

Technology is the primary platform for which our users access our information. We believe that investing in best-in-class products is essential to achieving our mission and supporting users to get into the backcountry. In the fall of this season, we publicly launched the Avy app, a project that was 18 months in the making and took hundreds of staff, volunteer, and contractor hours to develop.

We are thrilled that the Avy app has been downloaded by nearly 18,000 people and over half of the public observations were submitted through the app this season.

We will continue to refine the app, adding new features, improving the user experience, and fixing bugs. In addition to the app, we're also evaluating our aging website. The website is a distinct experience from the app as it is the primary source for the entire suite of NWAC products, including education, incident reports, and membership. We're still in the early steps of scoping our next website iteration, but we're taking what we learned through building a national and collaborative app and applying it to the website.

Building high-quality tech products takes a lot of resources, and we work to stretch every dollar by harnessing our incredible volunteer force and working with other avalanche centers to share resources. We're striving to build tools not just for the PNW, but nationally, because shared technology creates a more consistent experience for the public and forecasters alike.

EDUCATION & OUTREACH

An important part of NWAC's mission is education. This season, we rolled out a new Avalanche Awareness curriculum in collaboration with AIARE and the CAIC to better meet the needs of our community and the desired learning outcomes of the program. Additionally, we increased both the number of classes offered, as well as the geographic reach. We engaged with youth in our region through the Youth Awareness and Snow School programs. We taught awareness classes in schools in Cle Elum, Seattle, Bellevue, Leavenworth, Bellingham, and Portland and made connections at many of these schools for annual events. Nine Skagit Valley-based schools, primarily Title I schools, participated in the field-based Snow School program in collaboration with Mt Baker Ski Area and Western Washington University.

We continued to interact with backcountry users through our Trailhead Outreach program and expanded our volunteer base, which is critical to the success of this volunteer-led program. We launched a volunteer give-back program, offering a free Level 1 or Level 2 avalanche course to those who volunteered at least 30 hours over the season. Not only did this strengthen our volunteer interest and retention, it also gave us an opportunity to invest in the education of the volunteers who represent NWAC and engage with the community.

We also continued to invest in mentorship opportunities through our Women's Mentorship, Avalanche Awareness Instructor, Intern Observer, and Youth Ambassador programs. Participants in each of these programs gained hands-on experience in the field and knowledge for a career in the snow and avalanche industry. Each class, event, and program offered this season brought new community members into the fold and provided invaluable education to create a safer backcountry community.

Avalanche Awareness Classes

In 2023/24, we increased our number of total classes held (particularly in-person classes) since the pandemic. We improved our internal processes for scheduling and staffing classes, leading to a successful 139 classes and a total of 4,175 participants - almost double the amount of participants from 2022/23. Of the total participants, 32% were youth.

Trailhead Outreach

This was a busy year for the Trailhead Outreach Program! We ran 25 events over the course of the season and reached nine of our 10 forecasting zones. This program would not be possible without the dedication and support of our volunteers who donate their time to engage with users at winter backcountry trailheads.

CONT'D

Women's Professional Programming

This year marked five seasons of the Women's Mentorship Program, aiming to provide educational opportunities, mentorship, and professional connections for women seeking careers in the snow and avalanche industry. This season, four women completed the program and shadowed instructors on a Level 1 or Level 2 avalanche class in collaboration with Alpine Ascents International.

Awareness Instructor Program

This was our third season running the Awareness Instructor Training Program. This program was designed to break down barriers in the snow and avalanche industry and create a concrete pathway to paid work in the industry. Through this train-the-trainer approach, six new instructors learned how to deliver introductory avalanche awareness classes and joined NWAC's Awareness Instructor pool.

Intern Observers

The Intern Observer Program returned for its second season. These individuals interact weekly with our forecast team and receive direct mentorship and experience gathering field information, communicating with the public, teaching avalanche courses, and participating in community outreach. The Intern Observer, Women's Mentorship, and Avalanche Awareness Instructor programs are designed to help newer avalanche professionals develop a solid foundation for their life-long apprenticeships in the snow.

Youth Ambassador Program

We had another successful season of our Youth Ambassador Program, teaching 10 high school-aged students how to present an introductory 90-minute avalanche awareness class. This program spanned three virtual sessions and one field day at Snoqualmie Pass. Topics ranged from basic avalanche safety to how to effectively present information. As a final piece to the program, each youth ambassador scheduled and presented an avalanche awareness class to their peers at school or in their communities.

Snow School

Snow School is a youth education program for middle school students that NWAC runs in partnership with the Mt Baker Ski Area and Western Washington University. Students spend a day at the Mt Baker Ski Area traveling on snowshoes and learning about watershed ecology and snow science. This season, 450 students participated in the program, the majority of which were from Title I schools.

Snowmobile Program

We continue to develop and devote resources to our snowmobile education and outreach initiatives. This season, NWAC motorized avalanche educators attended five snowmobile club rides around the region. NWAC instructors and forecasters also attended three key snowmobile community events–WSSA Rendezvous, Mount Baker Shootout, and the Sno Jammers Fun Run–to connect with riders around the northwest on avalanche safety.

PC: Scott Rinckenberger

EVENTS

We were thrilled to host fully in-person events once again this season. We re-envisioned some of our NWAC-hosted events and attended more events held by other organizations than we had in many years. It was inspiring to connect with so many NWAC users and welcome new community members into the NWAC family. Thank you for bringing so much energy, enthusiasm, and support to all our events!

Snowbash

Snowbash was, as always, a fun way to kick off the season. Over 415 winter enthusiasts joined in on an evening of celebrating and fundraising at evo Seattle. Huge shoutout to our sponsors, volunteers, and guests for helping us raise $40,000 for NWAC at Snowbash!

NSAW

NSAW is the region's largest gathering of snow/avalanche professionals and backcountry recreationists. This year, NSAW was a fully in-person event with over 400 guests engaging in snow and avalanche education at Cascadia College in Bothell. We debuted a brand new breakout session format where attendees selected breakout sessions that fit their interests and knowledge level, joining smaller groups (25-50 people) for interactive presentations. Sessions ranged from topics on electromagnetic interference to snow immersion suffocation to how to build a backcountry repair kit. This new format allowed for much more customization and was well-received by attendees. We look forward to refining this format and hosting new topics in 2024!

Meet Your Forecaster

We held six Meet Your Forecaster events across Washington and Oregon last year: Seattle, Portland, Leavenworth, Bellingham, Mazama, and Cle Elum. Our Avalanche Forecasters connected with over 335 people at these events. This event series is a great way to form personal connections, ask questions, and gain more insight into what our forecasters do on a daily basis to create the forecasts.

MEMBERSHIP

Members are the backbone of NWAC—in fact, our members are NWAC! We are fortunate to have such a strong support system in our community. We've got some great corporate sponsors, government relationships, and industry partners. But we truly wouldn't exist without the support of individuals like you. Individual donations make up 60% of our budget—that is huge! If we didn't have support from individual donors like you, it wouldn't be possible to issue a daily forecast. Last season, 3,520 people joined our membership program, including 225 members who joined for free through a Level 1 avalanche course. We also hosted our first Membership Appreciation Party since 2019 on May 30, 2024. It was a blast celebrating and honoring our members, volunteers, instructors, and passionate supporters. We couldn't fuel the forecasts without you!

A huge thank you goes out to our Mountain Ghost members! This group of alpine enthusiasts came together to raise over $80,000 for NWAC this season, providing vital match funding throughout the year.

VOLUNTEERS

Volunteers are a crucial part of our organization, providing massive support for events, outreach, and special projects. In an effort to both incentivize and show appreciation for volunteers, we launched a Volunteer Give Back Program this season, where volunteers could earn NWAC membership gear for giving 12+ hours and were eligible for a free Level 1 or Level 2 avalanche course at 30+ hours. The program was met with enthusiasm and resulted in a large and reliable volunteer force.

PC: Grant Gunderson

MEDIA OUTREACH

Social Media

Our social media channels are a direct connection between NWAC and our community. The forecast team continued to share observations directly from the field multiple times a week throughout the season. These professional observations provide timely updates on mountain conditions with special insights from the team. Similar to last season, the forecast staff focused on providing more video content to give our community a better look at the work they do.

Throughout the 2023/24 season, we published 66 Instagram posts of professional observations. These posts reached over 911,000 people across the NWAC Instagram. We published 26 Facebook posts of professional observations. The posts collectively reached over 213,000 people.

Backcountry Bulletin

The Backcountry Bulletin remains one of our most viewed pieces of outreach. Every Friday during the forecast season, we share the state of the snowpack, mountain weather update, highlight an observation, and provide updates on our programming. Last season, we sent 31 bulletins. Our email list grew 13% while maintaining an open rate well above industry standard (48%). If you would like to subscribe to the Backcountry Bulletin, please visit our website.
